This battle took place on 12 February 1551 near Khanalpur, near Kairana. Raja Birbal, who was also the Mughal Subedar, used these forces to stop Guru Dasta from attacking the Mughal garrisons at Kairana. After the fall of the fort of Kairana, Raja Birbal took the fort of Karchha, a fort of his father-in-law, Raja Raja Bhim Chand of Karchha. In its first week of release, Kabhi Khushi Kabhie Gham generated over $100,000,000 in international ticket sales. The Hindi film stars Sanjay Dutt and Juhi Chawla and released in 2001 was the year's biggest hit overseas. The comedy was based on a stage play of the same name and was directed by Rajkumar Santoshi. Plot Seth Galatia (Sanjay Dutt) and his wife Yashodha (Juhi Chawla) own a company which manufactures sheets of aluminium foil, and thus are wealthy. Seth is also very protective of his sons, Ashmit and Rahul (Abhay Deol and Esha Deol). Ashmit and Rahul enjoy a good time living a carefree lifestyle, until Yashodha gets involved in politics. The duo is outraged to hear that Ashmit and Rahul plan to run away from home to a life of vice. Yashodha is arrested for corruption, and although the kids manage to escape, the entire family is ruined. Seth and his younger brother, Ashmit, move to London to start anew. Despite his wealth, Seth finds himself jobless and useless, and becomes a part-time bouncer. On his first day in London, he accidentally kills a mysterious figure named Danny, who comes into the club while he's on duty. Danny's revengeful spirit steals one of Seth's sons, Rahul, and doesn't return him. Seth begins to suspect that the ghost has kidnapped Rahul. With Danny constantly threatening them, Seth and his wife have to hide Rahul, who is a chip off the old block. Rahul resents his parents' strict upbringing and starts to emulate a punk style. Soon, however, his fellow "punk" friends ask him to come back home, and Seth and Yashodha can't let him be punished. Rahul returns home with the boys but secretly plans to stay there. One night, Rahul hears about a man named Anand who is on a quest to find his missing father. Anand's father, Narsimha, was involved in the same business as Seth and is now dead. Seth is able to track down Narsimha's house, where Anand lives with his father's widow, Suman. Suman, who is in a bad mood, invites the couple to stay at her house.
