* _Adobe Photoshop is offered for free. If you are serious about image manipulation, this is a necessity_ because Photoshop is pricey and it's difficult to get it to work without an Internet connection. * * * # The line between editing and photo manipulation It's not always clear whether an image has been manipulated or simply edited. Some people do not think of anything a little more than clean-up editing as something to be avoided, believing that anything that smudges an image or removes unwanted parts has ruined the picture. Photoshop is a program for photo retouching, and some great artists don't hesitate to use their brushes to make repairs in the same way that they would use a brush to paint something on a canvas. In contrast, a photo-editing program such as Photoshop may look at a canvas and decide to eliminate a section of your canvas with one brushstroke. That's photo manipulation! Obviously, the difference between editing and photo manipulation varies depending on the person. I think that, more than anything, it boils down to your personal taste. Do you prefer to have your images nicely edited or to tweak the image by hand and allow the photo edges to remain imperfect? Having said this, I do recommend using Photoshop for image editing in general. It really is the industry standard in this regard. If you are not familiar with the program, you can find many online tutorials that will get you familiar with it. * * *

Q: Getting Joomla to use the internal or external CSS I've got a Joomla project where I'm trying to change the default style of the administration interface of a component. In the XML I've managed to override the default style so that it doesn't look so bad, but what I want to do is use a theme which by default looks nice, and Joomla uses the theme when it's default one, but I can't find out how to tell it to use the theme instead of the Joomla's default one. A: The best way I've found to change the style of the administration screen is by modifying the params.php file of your admin/ directory. There is a $option variable defined and it's a multidimensional array. Under the admin/ folder, you can modify this $option variable and re-use those changes for whatever you're doing with your custom admin screen. There is quite a good article here on how to do that. It does take a while for some weeds and such to die but it is fairly straightforward and is fairly effective. I even used it to Q: Using real function in controller method How do I write a method that's receiving a function and returning a function? For example `myapp.controller('mycontroller', ['myService', '$scope', function(myService, $scope) { $scope.getData = function(data) { //some code } }]);` I know that I can do `myapp.controller('mycontroller', ['myService', '$scope', function(myService, $scope) { $scope.getData = function(data) { return function () { //some code }; }; }]);` But is it possible to write it a single line? A: Just return the function: `$scope.getData = function(data) { //some code } // return the function return function () { //some code }; $scope.getData();` More info on how to use If you want to pass params.
